About the Author

Karen Blakeman has worked in the information profession for over twenty years and has been a free-lance consultant since 1989. She provides training and consultancy on the use of technology to access and manage information, the Internet, and sources of business information. Her company was one of the first in the UK to offer training to the commercial sector on how to use the Internet. Prior to setting up her own company (RBA Information Services) she spent ten years in the Pharmaceutical and Health Care industry before moving to the International management consultancy group Strategic Planning Associates.

Karen edits and publishes a monthly, electronic newsletter called Tales from the Terminal Room (<http://www.rba.co.uk/tftr/>). Her publications include Search Strategies for the Internet, the UKOLUG Quick Guide to Effective Use of the Internet, Business Information on the Internet and contributions to Food Information on the Internet: a basic guide (published by the Leatherhead Food RA)

She is a Chartered Fellow of CILIP: the Chartered Institute of Library and Information Professionals, a member of the Association of Independent Information Professionals, and a member of the UK eInformation Group (UKeIG) and the City Information Group (CiG).
